For more than two decades, the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) has been persecuting its own people, torturing and murdering innocent people for their beliefs, for their values.

The crime of forced organ harvesting is possibly one of the greatest crimes committed against humanity and no one who knows how the Chinese system works can ignore that any situation that occurs in hospitals, whether public or Chinese military, are absolutely controlled by the CCP.

On July 20, 1999, the CCP launched one of the most terrible persecutions ever known to mankind. Millions of people are persecuted for their values, for their faith, for their beliefs: the Falun Gong practitioners. But not only them. Christians, Tibetans, Uyghurs are being targeted by the CCP. To achieve what? To eradicate them, to eliminate them physically.

But they went further and thought, why not enrich ourselves in a corrupt, bloody way with the suffering of these people? And then came the forced removal of organs.

This terrible crime where people are used as a living organ bank has been going on uninterruptedly in China for more than two decades, and continues to this day.

We have to realize that there are two absolutely significant dates in the history of the Chinese Communist Party: July 20, 1949, when it signed the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, and on July 20, 1999, exactly fifty years later, when it launched what is possibly described as the greatest crime in the history of mankind. Not only because of the number of millions of people affected, but also because of the cruelty used.

On July 20, 1999, a persecution was launched against the Falun Gong spiritual movement. Between 70, 80, 90 million Chinese, innocent citizens, and also Christians, Tibetans, Muslim Uyghurs, are persecuted not only for spiritual or religious reasons but also for racial, ethnic, and ultimately what amounts to a crime of genocide.

Fifty years after the signing of the Chinese Communist Party, the CCP itself is carrying out the greatest genocide in the history of mankind.

And I address anyone who has a position, a representative in the United Nations, but I do not address based on their position, I address directly to their heart, so that they can see directly what is right.

Sometimes we cannot speak or we limit ourselves because it is not politically correct, but the human being, you or me, at the end of the day will not be judged by political criteria, we will be judged by moral, ethical criteria, by the eternal values such as Truth or Compassion which is what has kept this civilization united, and then you and I will be judged at the end of our days to determine if we did the right thing.

If we take a stand directly with our heart to try to save lives, you have it in your hand, look within yourself, look within your heart, take action, save lives. These terrible crimes cannot go unpunished, in the silence, in the darkness of the prisons of the concentration labor camps in China, terrible.

They cannot go unpunished! It is in your hand, it is in your heart and it is also in your future when you will be judged, because above human justice, those of us who have beliefs, it is the Superior justice, the one that governs our lives, and the excuses of what was politically correct will not be valid.

Do it! Have that courage! May you be able to say, when the time comes, I did what I had to do, to save lives and to make the world a better place.

Thank you very much.
