It is very sad when such a great civilization as China with its spirituality and culture, the successor of Laozi, Confucius, great thinkers, and spiritual leaders is an object of condemnation; because this is the country where egregious crimes against humanity are being recorded, crimes against the human body, mind, thought sovereignty, and freedom.

Unfortunately, we are talking about the little-known fact of organ transplantations using organs taken from living people. There is nothing wrong with transplantation alone. It is a great achievement of humanity, of the human spirit and knowledge. But it is indeed horrifying when it is happening without their knowledge, without their consent, when the people that the organs are taken from are healthy individuals and the recipients don't know, that the chance to continue their life is a result of a crime. I'm not sure what the world's organizations like the UN and the defenders of human rights and human spirit have to do to put an end to this nightmare.

It is sad, that instead of developing the spirituality of their ancestors, China had taken such a fall. And it's all due to the communist doctrine that the country is living by. Human life is not valued by the communist ideology and the whole world knows this. Today we are fighting against this doctrine, but sadly, the virus of communism is very strong and powerful. It kills the human spirit the same way HIV kills the human body.

When I'm thinking about this matter, about this fact, because the forced organ harvesting from living people, from living, healthy, young people is indeed a well-known fact... I'm wondering if we break through our materialistic outlook and enter the context of spirituality, of the eternity of life. I'm thinking that the people who have been transplanted with stolen, unlawfully taken organs from living human beings, whose fortunes have been broken, haven't they taken heavy karma on themselves? Do they know it? Would they be happy if they knew? I think they wouldn't, they'd not be happy. If they knowingly accepted that the received organs are a result of murder and trade, haven't they taken a straight path towards hell according to Christianity. In Chinese philosophy, it is evil, which can't have place among the people.

And it is really strange and at the same time, it is not that strange, that the object of persecution of the communist party is Falun Dafa - a spiritual practice that teaches high human values and morals, such as freedom, compassion, creation. They are the real successors of Laozi, Confucius.

Is there salvation? Yes, there is when people are united, when people have information, when the world organizations and institutions don't close their eyes. The UN as an organization that defends human rights, the right of every person to live by their beliefs and views and to achieve happiness, does sanction China, but probably not in the way it should. I don't know what has to be done, but we have chosen smarter and more knowledgeable people in the international organizations, so they can do it. They must do it.

The practice of forced organ harvesting has to end because it is a stain and shame to humanity!
